

Points of interest

1 There has been a pier at Cromer from as early as 1391. In the last 200 years it has been washed away twice, in 1843 and 1890, until it was finally replaced by the iron jetty you see today.

2 Cromer crab fishing has been a tradition in Norfolk for centuries, attracting many tourists. The chalky and nutrient-rich waters make for a particularly flavoursome, tender and fragrant crab.

3 Cromer seafront is a County Wildlife Site, one of around 1,300 sites in Norfolk. The cliffs provide a habitat for uncommon plants such as rock sea-spurrey, thrift, samphire, and Scots lovage.

4 The north Norfolk coast can be a very windy place and sunken gardens like the ones at Cromer provide shelter for both plants and people. They form a good sun trap, usually quiet and away from the more boisterous sands.
